Cultural Persistence and Socio-Economic Mobility: A Comparative Study of Assimilation Among Armenians and Japanese in Los Angeles

by Sheila E. Henry

ArabsBibliographies - Transnational Communities Programme

“Cultural Persistence and Socio-Economic Mobility: A Comparative Study of Assimilation Among Armenians and Japanese in Los Angeles” is a comparative study that examines the socioeconomic mobility and persistence of two distinct ethnic groups, Armenians and Japanese, in the urban landscape of Los Angeles. This study hinges on the premise that cultural and social aspects of assimilation are integral to the socioeconomic status of individuals and communities. The research delves into how these groups navigate the socio-economic spheres, influenced by factors like cultural preservation, social mobility, and the role of economic assimilation.

This study, conducted by Sheila E. Henry, is a significant contribution to the field of social sciences, offering insights into the dynamics of cultural persistence and socioeconomic mobility in a diverse urban setting. It highlights the importance of studying assimilation in a comparative framework to understand the nuances of ethnic identity and socioeconomic success.